

Anaconda's Jim VanFossen standing next to the plaque he personally designed, purchased and placed under an apple tree just off the 8th fairway at Old Works Golf Course. The plaque commemorates the life of his friend (Wee) Willie Fedderson, a dwarf whose cabin stood next to this tree. Jim writes that Willie peddled newspapers, set bowling pens, loaded clay disks for trap shooting, sold apples and did about anything he could to make a living in Anaconda. For entertainment Willie and his friend Matt, who stood 6'6" tall would visit the "houses of ill repute" along Front Street. Matt would hoist Willie on his shoulders and Willie would peer in the transom window at the top of the door to get a free look at the activities.
